

The year Norway was divided

Overview

The modern-day Kingdom of Norway separated from Sweden, with which it previously had been united as a dual kingdom under one monarch, on June 7, 1905. The dissolution of the union (Bokmål: unionsoppløsningen; Nynorsk: unionsoppløysinga; Landsmål: unionsuppløysingi; Swedish: unionsupplösningen) between the kingdoms of Norway and Sweden under the House of Bernadotte, was set in motion by a resolution of the Storting on 7 June 1905. Following some. Johann Baptist Homann (1664–1724) was a German geographer and cartographer; map dated around 1730. About 10,000 BC, following the retreat inland of the great ice sheets, the earliest. The separation of Norway from Sweden on June 7, 1905, marks a significant moment in Scandinavian history. Norway had been in a union with Sweden since the Treaty of Kiel in 1814, following its cession from Denmark amidst the Napoleonic Wars. A law to that fact passed the Norwegian parliament the Storting. Oscar was. The Napoleonic wars proved especially damaging to Denmark's empire, weakening that countries influence in Sweden, and lead to Norway's cession to Sweden in 1807.
