Article Overview

Cable tray prices in West Africa vary widely, influenced by material, size, import dependency, and currency fluctuations, with steel trays typically starting around ₦9,000 in Nigeria.

Price Overview

Cable tray costs in West Africa are shaped by multiple factors. Steel trays are generally priced based on the global cost of hot-rolled coil (HRC) steel, while aluminum trays depend on aluminum ingot prices. Local fabrication and import costs, along with currency exchange rates, significantly affect final prices. For example, in Nigeria, a standard cable tray can cost approximately ₦9,000 per unit, though prices vary by size and supplier .

Factors Affecting Prices

- Raw Material Costs: Global steel and aluminum prices directly impact both imported and locally produced trays .
- Currency Exchange Rates: Depreciation of local currencies like the Nigerian Naira, Ghanaian Cedi, or West African CFA Franc increases import costs .
- Infrastructure Demand: Rapid industrialization and construction projects in power generation, transmission, and commercial sectors drive demand, sometimes pushing prices higher .
- Product Specifications: Heavier-duty, corrosion-resistant trays suitable for tropical climates are more expensive than standard light-duty trays .
